There's giving people space, and then there's giving them a way out of a future where the job won't get any better, life will get harder, and the machines that will make life easier will simply make them hate it more. The people who seem to embrace technology and the future as a utopia don't see one on this planet.

Because most of us grew up in a world without them, jobs programs can sound overly ambitious or suspiciously Leninist. In fact, they're neither. In 2010, as part of the stimulus, Mississippi launched a program that simply reimbursed employers for the wages they paid to eligible new hires—100 percent at first, then tapering down to 25 percent.

Many teachers, even seasoned veterans, have a fear of talking to parents about their child's misbehavior. Generally, they're afraid of three things: The parent (or parents) will get angry and defensive. The parent will question their competence. The parent will complain and make demands. These fears are well founded. While discussing behavior, teachers tend to
